Rev. Haythorne Inducted New Pastor

The induction of Rev. T. R. Haythorne to the pastorate of Blairmore United church took place on Sept. 3, with Rev. Dr. Magowan of Coleman presiding. Also present were Rev. Mr. Goddard of Pincher Creek and Mr. Kay of Bellevue.

After the induction a social hour was spent in the auditorium with Rev. and Mrs. Haythorne guests of honor. Then followed a number of speeches of good will from representatives of Coleman, Bellevue, Hillcrest and Pincher Creek. Rev. Mr. Haythorne pronounced the benediction.

Last Friday evening at the Blairmore United church, Rev. T. Haythorne dedicated a new communion table, a gift from one of the oldest church members, Mrs. F. M. Pinkney, in memory of loved ones.

United church members worshipped and profusion of color from flowers, vegetables and grains at Sunday night Harvest Thanksgiving service.

"Labor and capitalism must co-operate to solve their difficulties," Rev. Mr. Haythorne, minister of the church, told the large congregation. "It is up to us as Christians to take a vital interest in the problems of industry," he said.

"Industry has not developed a philosophy of life. Too many people have to go outside their jobs to find enjoyment, and this is causing unrest in our time."

"I have no philosophy to offer you," the young preacher advised, "except that offered in the New Testament." He warned that brawn, brains and skill have to co-operate in industry.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Civerese, of Hillcrest, have taken up residence in Blairmore.

Queer Reactions To First Broadcasts

NEW YORK.—What radio broadcasting broke upon a startled world, the wonder and amazement with which the marvelous new invention was received was not unmitigated by superstitious fear and dread says the Wall Street Journal. An examination of the early history of pioneer radio stations reveal some amazing human reactions.

"I never had lightning knock bricks off my chimney before," an early set-owner complained to the radio station. "What do you think I am, anyway?" While another man's wife heard queer noises in the three place, and had "hysterics". One woman said the radio waves played over her bed springs and kept her from going to sleep. In fear and trembling, she sat up 40 hours.

The prize story, however, concerned a widow, who was visited by a ghost of her late husband while she listened to the radio. She hoped he would return again, but when he did not, she wrote the radio station: "He didn't possess any spiritism in mechanical matters but he was living—Do you suppose he could have gotten on the wrong wave and been carried somewhere else?"

It took Abraham Lincoln only two minutes and 15 seconds to deliver the Gettysburg address.

SHEEP FEEDING RACK

WASTE of feed through tramping and feeding sheep can be easily avoided by using a well designed feeding rack. The accompanying drawing describes a sheep feeding rack of the portable type which provides a rack for hay and trough for grain. It may be built any convenient length, but only 15 to 16 feet long are most satisfactory. Since the bottom of the hay rack is raised 15 inches off the floor there is little danger of hay droppings getting into the wool of the animals. This design also makes it unnecessary for the sheep to get their heads through the spaces between the rails of the rack, instead the tendency is for the animals to pull the hay from the rack.

The legs are made of 2x4 inch scantlings as are also the cross members supporting the troughs and hay rack. The bottom of the rack is supported on two pieces of 3 by 4 inch plank, which, in turn, rest on the cross members. If good material is used and all joints are well nailed this will make a strong rack which will give good service for a long time.

This simple sheep feeder is not difficult to construct and will do good service for a long time because of rugged design.

Ample Sport For Hunters In New Law To Safeguard Birds

OTTAWA.—Annual rules aimed at giving hunters their fun—the ducks and geese a fighting chance—have been announced by the government. The 8,000-word regulations, the result of meticulous agreement with the provinces and the United States, detail dates, bag limits and firearm restrictions.

They are the official code of honor for the hundreds of canvas-coated Canadians who take to the wide-open spaces each Autumn in search of migratory birds.

In general, the new rules leave open-season dates and bag limits pretty much as they were last year, said Dr. H. H. Lewis of the Dominion Wildlife Service.

The daily limit for ducks in Eastern Canada is seven, compared with eight in the West. The Eastern season averages about a month during October and November, while Western Canada's season in some areas gets under way early in September.

For the first time, an all-Canada "ceiling" of three-shells-a-loading has been put into force. But only Saskatchewan is going that far. In other provinces—at the request of provincial authorities—the "ceiling" is one or two shells at a loading.

Must Fix Guns This means that automatic and pump guns must be plugged or altered in some way so that they hold only the number of shells permitted by the individual province.

Although most rules are substantially the same as last year's, Dr.

Lewis said in an interview, "there are changes in details in most parts of the country."

"Hunters should study the regulations for their particular districts to be up to date on these changes." Another new rule is the reduction from 15 to 10 in the "possession limit" for geese of all kinds. This includes geese "in hand," in lockers, automobiles and hunting camps. It does not apply in the Yukon and Northwest Territories, where geese are an important part of the natives' food supply.

Seasons and limits have been lengthened a bit in British Columbia and Alberta, where the duck population is somewhat better than in the other provinces. There are special new restrictions for the James Bay district, limiting the areas where non-residents may hunt.

Citation For World's Oldest Carrier Pigeon

WASHINGTON.—Kaiser, oldest carrier pigeon in the world and a veteran of two world wars, is getting a gold leg band and a citation. The 30-year-old bird is retired now, but during the Second World War he helped train other carrier pigeons, some of them his great-great-grandchildren.

He's still wearing the aluminum leg band with the seal of the German imperial crown which Kaiser Wilhelm's army put on him in the First World War.

Hatched at Cologne, Germany, in February, 1917, he was captured in the Meuse offensive and turned over to the signal corps as a prisoner of war. He's outlived more than a dozen wives.

Edible Oil Fields

Altona, Manitoba, Is The Leading Centre In Sunflower Growing

(By R. D. Magladay, In C-J-L Oval)

SUCH varied items as a bottle of medicine, a can of paint, or a pound of shortening that housewives are likely to bring home from shopping tours may seem to have little relation to a field of bright yellow sunflowers. But there's a definite relationship, particularly to the fields in the Red River Valley of Manitoba, where more and more farmers are making sunflowers their chief crop.

For Canadian-grown sunflowers are coming to play a more and more important role in the goods we use and the food we eat. From sunflower seeds comes rich, edible vegetable oil used in the production of soap, paint, varnish and certain medicines, as well as bread, pastries, hard substitutes, salad dressing and other foods.

The leading centre in sunflower growing is the town of Altona, Manitoba, 90 miles southwest of Winnipeg. This will be the third big year of production for Altona. Residents of this little town of 1,200 people and surrounding communities have built their own processing plant which turns out 80,000 pounds of oil a week. When the Dominion Government encouraged farmers to grow more sunflowers, residents of Altona and district raised $180,000 in share capital and government-secured bonds among themselves for the project.

Importance of sunflowers to food supplies has been increased by the drop of hard production in Canada during recent years. In 1944, 120 million pounds were manufactured while in 1946 production had dropped to a mere 45 million.

The Dominion Department of Agriculture is behind this scheme to supply the country with more vegetable oil. Previously, Canada had

Princess Margaret Receives Legacy

BALMORAL, Scotland.—Princess Margaret, the envy of 'teen-aged' girls throughout the world when she celebrated her 18th birthday. This means she can now have a house of her own and a lady-in-waiting. She also comes into a $100,000 legacy.

With her "coming of age", King George's vivacious, strong-willed younger daughter can decide just about everything for herself except the question of marriage. Her father still has the final say in that and his answer reportedly is "no".

As she ran downstairs to open her birthday presents, among the young persons waiting to greet her was the Duchess of Bedford, 27, reported by No. 1 on her long list of eligible bachelors.

Her coming of age brings her a $100,000 legacy left by Mrs. Margaret Grenville, a personal friend of Queen Elizabeth's. She has no personal income, however, so the King still has considerable control over her purse strings.

Excuse Was Good Enough For Judge

LONDON, Ont.—The way it is done "back home" saved Donald McCartney in court.

Recent arrival from Scotland, McCartney was charged with operating an automobile without a permit. He said he had just bought the car and explained that in Scotland a driver was allowed 48 hours to buy a licence. The charge was withdrawn.

WHITE HOUSE MISTRESS

Harriet Lane, President Madison's niece, his sister's daughter, was mistress of the White House during his term of office. Orphaned when she nine years old, Miss Lane lived thereafter with her uncle—a bachelor. She also was with Madison in his career abroad.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD

By WILLIAM FERGUSON

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

DATE WITH A LADY

By WILL SHED

JOHN opened her bedroom door and stood there watching her fix her hair. He shuffled his feet nervously, trying to get up enough nerve to tell her.

"Mary," he stammered. She looked around at him curiously, her hair-brush raised in mid-stroke.

"What is it, John?" She wrinkled her brow in worried concern. "You haven't been sitting right all evening. Is there something that I can do?" John stared at the ceiling as though he had never seen it before, spending half a minute examining the chandelier. Finally he looked at her almost pleadingly.

"Yes, there is. I have something to tell you, but turn the other way and go on with your hair."

Mary turned back to the mirror, and started running the brush over her sleek auburn hair again. John examined the ceiling again, and finally looked at the back of her dressing gown.

"Mary," he said, "I have something to tell you, as I said, and I don't know quite how to put it. You know as well as I that our marriage hasn't been going too well these last few months. I don't know what's wrong with us. Maybe just the monotony."

She glanced at his reflection in the mirror, and watched him nervously scrapping his right shoe back and forth across the rug. He looked up at once, so she said, "Yes, I know it hasn't been going too well?"

He glanced at the reflection of her face in the mirror, then watched her back again.

He shifted nervously for a minute. "Well, whatever the cause is, it just isn't right. What I'm trying to say is that this evening I have a date... a date with a lady I know."

Mary didn't turn around. She sat watching his reflection in the mirror. Her shoulders sagged a little as she sat with her hands on the dressing table top. "Is she anyone I know?" she asked.

"Yes," he stammered, "I'm afraid she is. I shan't tell you who, but you know her pretty well."

"It's been a long time since you've gone out with another woman, hasn't it, John?" she asked wearily.

He shuffled his feet nervously again. "Yes it has. I haven't had a date for three years... since before we were married. I didn't realize how long it had been. I felt that I had better tell you. You are my wife, and I don't see why I should keep a thing like this secret."

Mary slowly ran the comb over her hair as she answered. "I think it was very kind of you to tell me, you see, I had the same problem. I... I have a date tonight too."

He stopped shuffling his feet and stared at her. "You have a date tonight, too?" Then he seemed to sag a little. "I hope you'll have a wonderful time."

She smiled at herself in the mirror. "I'm sure I do. I've got everything I admire in a man. He's handsome, he's kind, he's a gentleman," her eyes seemed to sparkle, "he's wonderful!"

John turned away, and walked through the door into his dressing room. He got out his tuxedo, and spread it and his shirt, socks, and cuffs out on the bed. After a shower he slowly got dressed. His date wasn't until eight-thirty.

When he was dressed, he stopped by Mary's room to say goodnight.

She had on her white evening dress, the one that she looked so beautiful in. She stopped trying to get her left earring to stay on and smiled at him. "Where are you supposed to meet her, John?"

He tried to smile back, but was not very successful. "I'm meeting her in front of the bank at eight-thirty," he said. He glanced at himself in her mirror, and straightened his black tie.

"Where are you taking her?" she asked.

He looked down at the smoothness of the top of her head. "I don't know yet. I think a thing like that should be decided on the spur of the moment, don't you?"

"Yes, I guess it is more romantic," she said. "Oh, by the way, will you call me a taxi on your way out?"

He showed the cab-stand around the corner, then went out and got in his convertible coupe. It would be a nice night for a drive in the country, so he put on the top before he started.

At eight-thirty he was standing in front of the bank and scuffling his shoe back and forth on the sidewalk as he waited for his date. Every few minutes he would glance up at the clock in front of the bank, then up at the street toward the main part of town.

At eight-thirty-five he saw a figure approaching down the sidewalk. As she got closer he saw that it was his date... the girl he had been waiting for. The girl might well be the one that he would spend the rest of his life with.

As she came up he tipped his top hat in a gallant manner and said, smilingly, "I've been waiting for you, but then I would wait forever for you."

She smiled at him, and he could see that she loved him as much as he loved her. He opened the door of his coupe, and he and Mary got in and drove away to an evening of romance.

"NERVES"

She Called It

Long interest in the "Nerves" she never went out any more—always too tired. "Nerves" she thought—but it was her kidneys—the filters of her blood—that needed attention. She used Dodd's Kidney Pills at once. The improved action of her kidneys helped to clear away blood impurities and excess acids. Fatigue, headache, backache, lack of energy disappeared. Dodd's Kidney Pills contain essential oils and medicinal ingredients that act directly upon the kidneys—and help restore their normal action. 144

SMALL NUMBER IN CANADA UNEMPLOYED

OTTAWA.—Employment in Canada is being maintained at a high level, the Bureau of Statistics reported.

A survey conducted during the week ended last June 5 showed almost 5,000,000 Canadians had jobs. The exact figure was 4,948,000 of a total "working force" of 5,030,000. That left $2,000 out of work.

Statistics indicate total Canadian employment is growing at the rate of about 100,000 a year, the bureau said. Employment in the prairie provinces and the maritime provinces "seems to be relatively stable but there is a marked upward trend in the other regions."

Record Price Paid For Canadian Ram

SALT LAKE CITY.—A small, black-faced Suffolk ram from Alberta brought $3,350 at the opening session of the 33rd annual National Ram Sale. The high price was paid by J. Laidlow of Mutton, Idaho, to P. J. Rock & Son of Drumheller, Alta.

J. Melvon Jones, secretary of the National Wool Growers' Association, sponsor of the sale, said that so far as he knew the price is the highest ever paid for a Suffolk ram. The sale attracted more than 500 buyers and sheepmen from Canada, Britain and the United States.

FURNISHINGS SOUND QUEER FOR CLUBHOUSE

Canada And U.S. To Share Military Data

WASHINGTON.—James Forrestal, defence secretary, disclosed that the United States and Canada have agreed informally to exchange military information on a "broad general basis."

Forrestal recently returned from Ottawa where he conferred with Hon. Brooke Claxton, Canada's minister of national defence.

He did not specify what types of military information would be exchanged. But his aides indicated that data on potential war production would get a top priority.

They said officials of both countries are discussing methods of allocating specific industrial tasks to each nation in the event of war. The purpose of this would be to prevent unwarranted surpluses of some materials and unnecessary shortages of others.

Forrestal said it is "too early" to say whether the informal U.S.-Canadian agreement will lead to a formal pact.

Discussions on a U.S.-Canadian war plan are continuing through the United States-Canadian joint defence board.

Forrestal's aides said that U.S.-Canadian conferees will discuss plans for standardizing the calibers of rifles and artillery weapons of the two armies. At present, they have different calibers. American bullets do not fit Canadian weapons, and vice versa.

Defence officials said they were impressed by the "friendly, co-operative attitude" of the Canadians in the preliminary conferences. Among the subjects discussed, they said, was the status of U.S. air bases on Newfoundland, now held under a 99-year lease.

They were dancing at a Gulf Coast resort. He held her tightly, and he danced as though floating on a cloud. The music stopped. "Let's go out on the porch," he said. "Outside he took her in his arms and whispered, 'Darling, I love you very much. I may not be rich like Jack Groan, I may not have a car like his, or I may not spend money like he does, but I do love you so much I'd do anything in the world for you."

Two soft white arms reached around his neck, two ruby lips whispered in his ear: "Darling, introduce me to Jack Groan."—Rotarian Magazine.

Two men, neither of championship class, and whose knowledge of the rules of golf was no more accurate than their technical knowledge of the various shots, were standing on the first tee on the course. The first fairway was bordered on the right by a row of oak trees. (Not Blairmore course, no oak trees, but). One of the men tied his ball and, taking a swing, sliced to such an extent that the ball struck one of the trees fairly, and the ball came bounding back over the tee so that the players in question, without moving from his stance, caught it in his hand as it was passing.

With a bewildered look on his face, he turned to his opponent and asked: "What shall I do now?" His opponent, without studied effort or inclination to make a joke, replied: "Tie it up again, hit it, and then put your hands in your pockets."

EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS

How often you hear people tell about someone getting "a lucky break"? It does not seem to occur to them that often what we call good fortune is the result of intelligent planning.

Astute men do not just sit back and wait for opportunities. They improve their skills, and learn more and more about their field of work, thus paving the way for opportunities.

Some years ago a certain cellist in a noted symphony orchestra paved the way for his great opportunity by memorizing the complete score of an opera. When the orchestra's regular conductor was suddenly stricken with illness, the cellist led the performance with brilliant success. Today he is world famous!

Thousands of cases could be quoted to illustrate how men have improved their fortunes by being prepared when opportunity knocked.

So why not plan now to put a knocker on your door?

No one should rely on lucky breaks to provide a retirement income and financial protection for their family.
These things can be planned now on the basis of your present income, through life insurance. Then you will be sure of your future.

ENNIS-THIBERT

One of the prettiest weddings of the season was solemnized in St.
Joseph's church, Cowley, Saturday,
August 28, when Marie Lamonde Lucille, second daughter of Mrs. Irene Thibert and the late Donat Thibert of Lunenburg, was united in marriage to Mr. Louis Ennis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ennis, of Blaimore.

Father Violini officiated. Father
Harrington was also present.

The bride who was given away by her brother, Mr. Rene Thibert, was exquisite in a floor-length gown of white duchess satin with sweetheart neckline, Queen Anne sleeves and skirt appliqued with white flowers. A fingertip veil with halo of lace completed her attire. Her only ornament was a necklace of pearls. She carried a bouquet of red and white roses.

The two bridesmaids, Miss Fer-nande Thibert, youngest sister of the bride, chose a floor-length gown of lemon yellow taffeta. Her hair ornament was yellow sweetheart roses and she carried a nosegay of yellow gladioli and sweet peas, and Miss Virginia Ennis, sister of the groom, wore a floor-length gown of coral tripple sheer and black lace with hair ornament of coral sweetheart roses and carrying a nosegay of coral gladioli and sweet peas. Corinne and Lorraine Thibert, nieces of the bride, wore flower girls. They wore floor-length dresses of white taffeta with nosegays of sweet peas and gladioli.

The groom was supported by Mr.
Joe Yanota and Mr. Reno Munsaggi was usher.

The mother of the bride was gowned in black crepe with corsage of red roses, while the groom's mother wore a gown of green crepe with blush pink roses for her corsage.

The reception was held at the home of the bride, when a buffet luncheon was served to a hundred guests, after which the bride donned an ensemble of cinnamon brown gabardine with green accessories when the happy young couple left for a honeymoon trip through British Columbia, and on their return will reside in Blaimore.

What to do for FAINTING

FAINTING is a condition due to sudden failure of the action of the heart, which may be caused by hemorrhage; or by fatigue.
want of food, or a close or crowded room; or by fright, dread, sudden bad news, or by the sudden relief from fear or anxiety after prolonged suspense.

THE SIGNS ARE: The patient turns giddy and falls; the face is pale; the pulse is rapid and weak, or almost imperceptible;
the breathing is quick, sighing and irregular, and the skin becomes dry and clammy.

TREATMENT:

1. Undo all clothing about the neck, chest and waist.
2. Ensure an abundance of fresh air; open windows and doors; keep back crowd; remove from harmful gasses or impure atmosphere.
3. Sprinkle the face with hot and cold water alternately, and apply warmth to the pit of the stomach and over the heart; vigorous friction of the limbs upwards has a stimulating effect. Smelling salts may be held to the nose.
4. If bleeding has been the cause of the condition, guard against its recurrence. The wound will not bleed to any marked extent while the action of the heart is feeble. The wound must be carefully watched to be sure that bleeding does not recur when the patient begins to regain consciousness and the heart's action improves; if there is no wound look for signs of hemorrhage from an internal organ.
5. If want of nourishment has been the cause of the condition give food sparingly.
6. Give no food or fluids whatever by the mouth while the patient is insensible.

Air Transport

WHILE THE PEOPLE OF ALL NATIONS have not yet learned to live together in complete agreement, there are many signs that progress is being made toward the establishment of better international understanding and co-operation. Air transport, which links people of many countries by cutting down distance, which was in the past a barrier, and by bringing nations together geographically and in other ways, is a force which is contributing a great deal at this time to the building up of confidence and good will. The International Air Transport Association, which has seventy member companies, in forty countries, is now attempting to standardize air transport throughout the world and to establish high standards of safety, efficiency, speed and economy.

High Degree Of Uniformity

Member companies of the organization carry most of the world's air traffic over 500,000 miles of routes and employ more than half a million men and women. They give indirect employment to millions more. A recent article, telling of the work of the Association, says, in part, "In a world that speaks many languages, and uses many different systems of writing, law, currency and measurement, the International Air Transport Association is the airlines' answer to the imperative need for complete international understanding on all procedures, practices and devices used in their industry." As a result of their work, a high degree of uniformity in many matters has already been achieved.

Possible On Wider Scale

The interest of the Association in safety is demonstrated by the fact that there is exchange of information between the various companies on accidents and near-accidents, in the hope of increasing the safety of air travel throughout the world. The scope of the work which is being done, and the success with which efforts at establishing co-operation in matters relating to air travel have been met, are encouraging signs for those who hope for lasting world peace. The many difficulties which must be overcome, and the many differences in practice between nations which must be brought to one standard, show that there are ways of bringing about agreement and understanding and indicate that what is being achieved in the matter of air travel may well be possible on a much wider scale.

Children Had Fun While It Lasted

PETERBOROUGH, Ont.—When ten and $20 bills fluttered on Peterborough sidewalks pedestrians found the currency was being cast to the winds by two small children in an automobile.

Everett Moss, local grocer and father of the children, said he put his Saturday's receipts in the glove compartment and drove to the bank to deposit the money. When he stopped off on the way, the children opened the compartment and started scattering bills. He says he's still missing $30.

New Flagstaff Now On Tower Of London

LONDON.—The Tower of London's new flagstaff, cut from a Douglas fir believed to be 389 years old, was brought into service recently, when it took the place of old staff which had stood on the White Tower from 1580 till 1945.

The new flagstaff is a gift from British Columbia. When cut the tree was 158 feet long. The finished and white-painted flagstaff measures 85 feet, about 10 feet of which is embedded in the roof.

FUNNY And OTHERWISE

"Your dog," said the man in the barber's chair, "seems to enjoy watching you cut hair."

"It isn't that," said the barber. "Sometimes I snip off a piece of ear."

The teacher had asked the class to write an essay on "Our Dog." Young Jimmy was the first to finish. His effort read: "Our Dog. We haven't got one."

Lucy: "Nobody will ever care for me."

Jack: "Don't say that, Lucy. After all, in this world there's a man for every woman. It's a wonderful arrangement."

Lucy: "I don't want to change it—just want to get in on it."

"How's business?" a passer-by asked the old scissors grinder.

"Fine," he said. "I never saw things so dull."

"Why have you got 'Push' printed on that door when it opens outward?"

"That's so people will be sure to pull it."

A young woman was extremely vain of the honors conferred upon two distant male relatives. She talked on the subject to all and sundry: "I have two relatives in the House of Lords. Have you any?"

"No," replied one of her acquaintances, "but I have three maiden aunts in the Kingdom of Heaven."

"And so you are the noble fellow who rescued my wife at the risk of your life?" said Mr. Rightist.

"Take this shilling my brave fellow as an expression of my thankfulness."

"All right 'gun'vor, thank ye," and then he added softly: "You know better'n I do what your wife's worth."

Macpherson took his gramophone back to the shop.

Said the assistant: "It is most unusual to have a machine returned after a year's use. What's wrong with it?"

"The needle's broken," explained Macpherson.

"Uncle Jeff was telling about the death of nephew who had never amounted to much."

"What was the complaint?"

"Uncle Jeff was asked."

"Wuzn't no complaint," Uncle Jeff answered. "Everybody wuz perfectly satisfied."

SAVE THAT CHICKEN FEATHER!

IT MAY BECOME WIG, CUP OR AN ASH TRAY!

Dr. Bum Bill Bee—Bee venom and even honey may find important place in medical treatments.

By JAY RICHTER
Central Press Correspondent

Canadian research scientists—the quiet men who work and dream in obscure laboratories across the nation—are coming up with a host of new discoveries to make your life healthier, happier, and perhaps longer.

Their tools include everything from corn cobs and chicken feathers to repulsive rats and the ordinary honeybee. Take those chicken feathers, for example.

For several years, U.S. agriculture department researchers at Albany, Cal., have been fiddling around with feathers off and on, trying to make something useful of them once the chicken is plucked. Now, they are beginning to sight some practical possibilities.

Feather protein, they discovered recently, can be used in making sizing, adhesives, plastics, cold-water paints, plaster retarders and inks.

Already, the fibre from feathers is being used commercially in the wigs you see on department store manikins, and in such commercial specialties as industrial filters. They are also used in making plastic pencils, drinking cups and ash trays.

Human beings now suffering a variety of ills may some day be helped toward recovery by the bee.

Don't Ignore Appetite

New evidence uncovered at the department's bee culture laboratory in Beltsville, Md., indicates that this versatile insect is a source of treatment for tuberculosis, arthritis, boils and cuts.

In test tube experiments, a substance from diseased bees has killed tubercular bacilli. There are strong signs that honey can be applied to wounds and cuts to kill bacteria, and to speed healing. Bee venom has helped some arthritis sufferers.

The notion has got around that appetite may be the best guide to the kind of food you should eat for a good diet. Now, some findings which indicate otherwise.

In experiments with rats, Dr. E. M. Scott of the University of Pittsburgh discovered that the rodents, left to pick and choose among foods, failed to select those containing essential protein. Some of the rats, with nutritious food right under their noses, almost starved.

There was a lot of difference between rats, Dr. Scott found. Rat A would eat all right while rat B would waste away.

The moral, according to scientists, is probably this: Don't ignore your appetite in selecting foods, but also depend upon your intelligence and education.

Work by researchers at the agriculture department laboratory in Peoria, Ill., promises to end the constant threat of gasoline shortage in America.

Alcohol made from grain can be used in motor fuel for special purposes, says Guido E. Hilbert, director of the Peoria laboratory. Tests show that loaded trucks can take hills in high by automatic injection.

Wig—it was made from feathers.

into the engine of an alcohol-water mixture. Passenger cars, using low-octane gas, could be equipped to do the same.

A single gallon of ethyl alcohol and nine gallons of low-grade gas, Hilbert says, combine to make 10 gallons of premium anti-knock fuel.

Grain alcohol is still expensive for general use, but research men recently cut production costs three cents per gallon by improvement of conversion methods.

Economies also have been made in production of alcohol from corn, of all things, and semi-commercial tests are under way, Hilbert explains.

Many other advances are being made in the development of new uses for farm products and by-products.

For example, recent research at the Peoria laboratory shows that soybean protein can be used with other ingredients to make an "indestructible" ice cream which won't melt, run or lose its shape in warm weather.

Scientists at the laboratory, who occasionally whip up a batch for an afternoon snack, report that it's delicious.

They think the ice cream may be on the market soon, along with soybean ices, candy, meringues, and tarts.

They are also enthusiastic about an experimental glue they have extracted from soybeans. This super-sticky holds metal to metal, and seals envelopes so tightly it's impossible for "busy-bodies" to steam them open.

Missing Link

Progress by research men in plant breeding is bringing better quality foods to American tables. One example is the "Kennebec" potato which plant scientists consider the best spud developed anywhere.

Besides reproducing itself at an almost indecent rate, the Kennebec is large and a good "cooker". In a season or two, there will be enough seed for wide plantings.

Dr. Francis J. Stevenson, scientific research man at Beltsville, Md., worked 25 years to develop the Kennebec. His interest is personal as well as professional.

"I like potatoes in every form known to man," he declares. "As a matter of fact, I'd eat them three times a day if my wife would let me."

Another new vegetable is a unique onion called simply "California Red No. 1", the first successful onion hybrid. Actually, the onion is the result of a lucky find made many years ago.

One day in 1925 when he was in California, Dr. Henry A. Jones, now at Beltsville, stumbled upon a "malesteric" onion, a plant with only female characteristics.

It is the only single-seed onion plant which ever has been found, although it meant nothing to Jones at the time who kept it only because it was a freak.

When hybrid corn came along, some scientists thought about developing a hybrid onion. But they were stymied by the fact that all onion plants they'd ever seen had both female and male characteristics—and a hybrid couldn't be developed without an all-female plant.

Dr. Jones' lucky find of almost a quarter-century later supplied the missing link for today's champion among onions, California Hybrid No. 1.

The 22,000-ton aircraft carrier, Furious, only ship of her class of three to survive the war, is to be a target ship for the navy.

Supplies Arrived Nearly Century Late

PHILADELPHIA.—Supplies shipped from England aboard a cargo vessel in 1750 to the Colonial army of Philadelphia finally have arrived.

They included such items as pewter plates, brass buttons, silver shoe buckles, locks of all sizes with keys to match, square nails, copper tea kettles, two-pronged forks and all sorts of funny looking things.

The relics were part of the cargo on an early 18th century English vessel discovered by United States Army Engineers some weeks ago during dredging operations in the Delaware River. Contents of the ship were pulled ashore by a suction pipe.

PEOPLE TOO FRIENDLY FOR BLIND OPERATOR

VICTORIA, B.C.—Victoria people are too friendly, says Robert Dickson, blind operator of a news kiosk beside the public library. Victorians give his guide dog too much attention when she is leading him along the streets, he complains. Everyone, it seems, wants to pet her.
